

Open Call for a Symposium

Technologies in theatre, performance,
and exhibition design

Prague Quadrennial
of Performance Design and Space

October 16–17, 2024, Prague
Deadline for Application:
20 April, 2024

Technologies in theatre and performance are a highly vibrant and complex area. Whether old or new, high or low, digital or analogue, technologies, or different tools, instruments, devices, equipment, machines, and machinery, are potential and potent resources in the scenographic process. They inspire, excite, and scare us. They can be an asset but also create problems. The recent technological developments that require more specialized knowledge and expertise have brought on the need and the opportunity for scenographers and designers to collaborate with scientists, engineers, and industry partners. While pushing the boundaries of what is possible in performance, employing these most advanced technologies is conditioned by access, stemming from material, institutional, and political conditions in which we produce art. Moreover, our ideas of technologies are often reduced to Western notions of progress and innovation.

This symposium wants to explore this multi-dimensional dynamic of technologies in theatre, performance, and exhibition design. It aims to bring together performance designers, scenographers, makers, artists, and researchers who work with and on technologies.

We welcome proposals addressing the following questions:

- What kind of technologies do we currently use in theatre, performance, and in exhibition design?
- To what ends do we use technologies?
- Can we think of technologies in a more expanded and less normative way?
- How do scenographers, performance designers and makers collaborate with scientists, engineers, and industry partners?
- What technologies do scenographers, performance designers and makers use in contexts of precarity with limited financial resources?
- How have been technologies present and represented at the Prague Quadrennial throughout its history?

Formats:

- Individual papers (15 minutes)
- Flash Talks (8–10 minutes)

The symposium will be held in English. Upon request, PQ can provide guidance and support to speakers whose first language is not English.

How to submit:

Please use the form below to submit a description of your talk (max 250 words), a short bio (max 50 words), a title and an indication of the chosen format.

Submit your proposal

Questions should be directed at: call@pq.cz

Important Dates:

Call Published: 20 February, 2024

Deadline for Application: 20 April, 2024

Notification of Acceptance: 10 May, 2024

Confirmation of Participation: 31 August, 2024

Date of the Symposium: 16–17 October, 2024

The Symposium is organised by the Arts and Theatre Institute, a contributory organisation of the Ministry of Culture Czech Republic.

Supported by:

Organized by:

Prague Quadrennial of Performance Design and Space